- It advances/enhances the profession of counseling.

CACREP accreditation contributes to the unity of the Counseling profession by bringing together practitioners, educators, and students and by continually improving professional preparation, educational research and scholarship, and practice. CACREP accreditation provides assurance of a quality educational program that prepares Professional Counselors.

CACREP accreditation provides assurance that accredited programs “measure up” to standards developed by a national consensus of those in the field of Professional Counseling. Thus, federal agencies, state licensing boards and national certification agencies are assured that programs accredited by CACREP provide a consistent, quality education in preparation for counselor credentialing.

CACREP accreditation provides recognition that the education offered by an accredited program has completed an extensive peer-evaluation process and meets standards established by and for the Counseling profession. Students can be assured that all requisite knowledge and skills areas will be included in the course of study necessary for entry into the field of Professional Counseling.

Additionally, clients and consumers of counseling services benefit from the rigorous preparation of the Professional Counselor who has graduated from a CACREP program.
